

Measured comparison of two tessellations of one sphere (radius 15 mm)

Mean dihedral angle is a limited detail-retention proxy for closely related meshes at identical scale. It is not a perceptual quality metric and is not comparable across unrelated meshes or tessellation densities.